

ABOUT CONNECT

We open minds: from politicians to the public, from communities to the commentariat, we open minds to new thinking, new ideas, new arguments and new developments.

We have an exciting client base, spanning charities, business, local government, trade unions and property clients with an interest in a wide range of policy areas from housing, to apprenticeships, to public services and utilities.

JOINING CONNECT

To support our growth, and our recent wins, we are looking for candidates who are interested in working in public affairs, ready to start from day one and with potential to become excellent consultants. We will consider applicants with a degree in any subject – the most important thing is a passion for politics and a desire to make a career in public affairs.

You will be working with a cross-party, dynamic team with experience in Parliament, the political parties, trades unions, charities, local government and business across a range of policy areas. You will be working from day one directly for our clients, as a member of our monitoring team and as a consultation on client accounts.

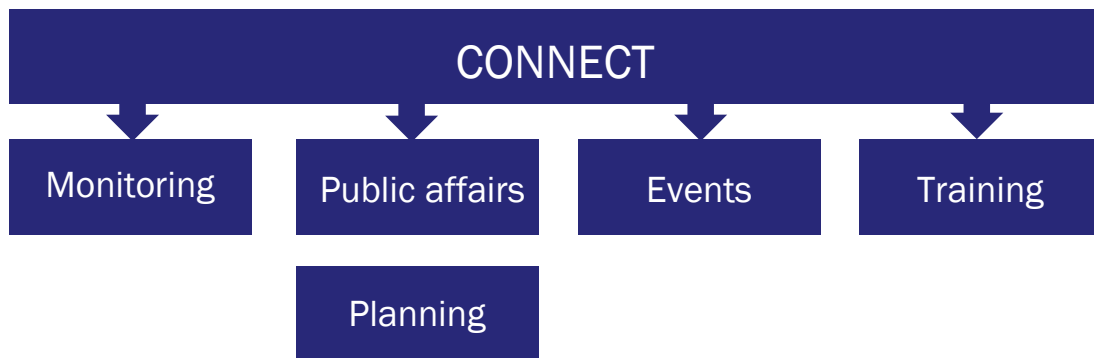

As an Investor In People (Gold Standard) we are committed to developing the skills of our staff, and see our Graduates as our future leaders. Our ambition is for our recruits to develop their careers at Connect, and we are now looking for new members of our team.

You will be working with a cross-party, dynamic team with experience in Parliament, the political parties, trades unions, charities, local government and business across a range of policy areas.

WORKING WITH US

We are a 'hands-on' consultancy and new recruits quickly learn the how to deliver high-quality work under pressure, respond to client needs and become experts in the political process. You will be a core member of our client services team from day one and quickly gather a detailed understanding of client and project management, business and financial systems, as well as developing detailed policy and political knowledge.

Drawing on external and internal resources, you will gain experience across a range of services:

In your first six months you will:

- Develop a strong understanding of UK politics and processes in Westminster, Whitehall, the devolved parliaments and in regional and local government;
- Understand the role and shape of the public affairs industry;
- Become a core part of our politics team providing monitoring services to clients;
- Provide research and support across our client base;
- Work on events and conferences;
- Support on planning applications with local engagement, consultation, exhibitions and liaison with local press;
- Contribute to Connect's social media presence;
- Learn how to network and establish new contacts;
- Learn how to identify, develop and secure new business for Connect;
- Undertake a number of internal training courses.

WHO DO WE WANT?
